Face it. We all do it — we look at our smartphones and tablets even before our first sip of coffee to learn what we need to know for the day. Information matters and getting a leg up on what is important matters even more.

But hundreds of health policy announcements come out every day, and it is very difficult to know which ones end up being relevant. Wouldn't it be great if someone you trusted, who knew health policy inside and out, culled through what is out there, told you what is making news, and pointed you to what you need to know each day?

That's what PolicyCrush is all about. Fast, reliable access to what matters most in health care.
